HEADER :

A website header sits at the top of each page and serves a few very important purposes. This does more than provide a place for your logo name; it is part of a consistent user experience that all good websites share. The design of a header may differ from site to site, but the core features that determine how a site is navigated and experienced remains the same.

This section is usually consistent across all of the pages on the website, however, some designs give the home page a slightly different header appearance in order to draw attention to featured areas of the site.

Overall, a good header makes your website easier to navigate, establishes your brand, and creates a consistent browsing experience throughout your website.

PEARL ~ STYLES IN TREND !!

Get the best of best only on PEARL's

By. Pearls
2023-2027

Editor's note: With fashion brands, big and small, acquiring an online presence, the competition to win customers is getting more intense. Uploading a catalog and enabling online transactions is no longer enough – your website needs to provide sublime customer experience to engage and convert. Relying on our vast ecommerce business consulting experience, we are talking today about how to achieve this excellence in the fashion domain. The market forecasts regarding fashion e-retail are more than positive: fashion is one of the largest B2C market segments estimated at $525.1 billion in 2019 and predicted to grow further at 9.4% per year. Such a pace will attract about $953.1 billion by the end of 2024. While consumer demand is sustainably high, all market entrants face a challenge of standing out in the competition and winning lasting trust and interest of customers.

After years - years - of pondering these two problems and how to solve them, I slipped, hit my head on the sink, and when I came to I had a revelation! A vision! A picture in my head! A picture of this! This is what makes time travel possible: the flux capacitor!

It wasn't as dramatic as Doc's revelation in Back to the Future. It just occurred to me while I was going for a run. The revelation: the entire curriculum should be a series of projects. Instead of individual coding challenges, we'll just have projects, each with their own seamless series of tests. Each test gives you just enough information to figure out how to get it to pass. (And you can view hints if that isn't enough.)

" Pearl's invite you to explore the ultimate rock's on trends!! "

No more walls of explanatory text. No more walls of tests. Just one test at a time, as you build up a working project. Over the course of passing thousands of tests, you build up projects and your own understanding of coding fundamentals. There is no transition between lessons and projects, because the lessons themselves are baked into projects. And there's plenty of repetition to help you retain everything because – hey - building projects in real life has plenty of repetition.

The main design challenge is taking what is currently paragraphs of explanation and instructions and packing them into a single test description text. Each project will involve dozens of tests like this. People will be coding the entire time, rather than switching back and forth from "reading mode" to "coding mode."

Instead of a series of coding challenges, people will be in their code editor passing one test after another, quickly building up a project. People will get into a real flow state, similar to what they experience when they build the required projects at the end of each certification. They'll get that sense of forward progress right from the beginning.

MAIN:
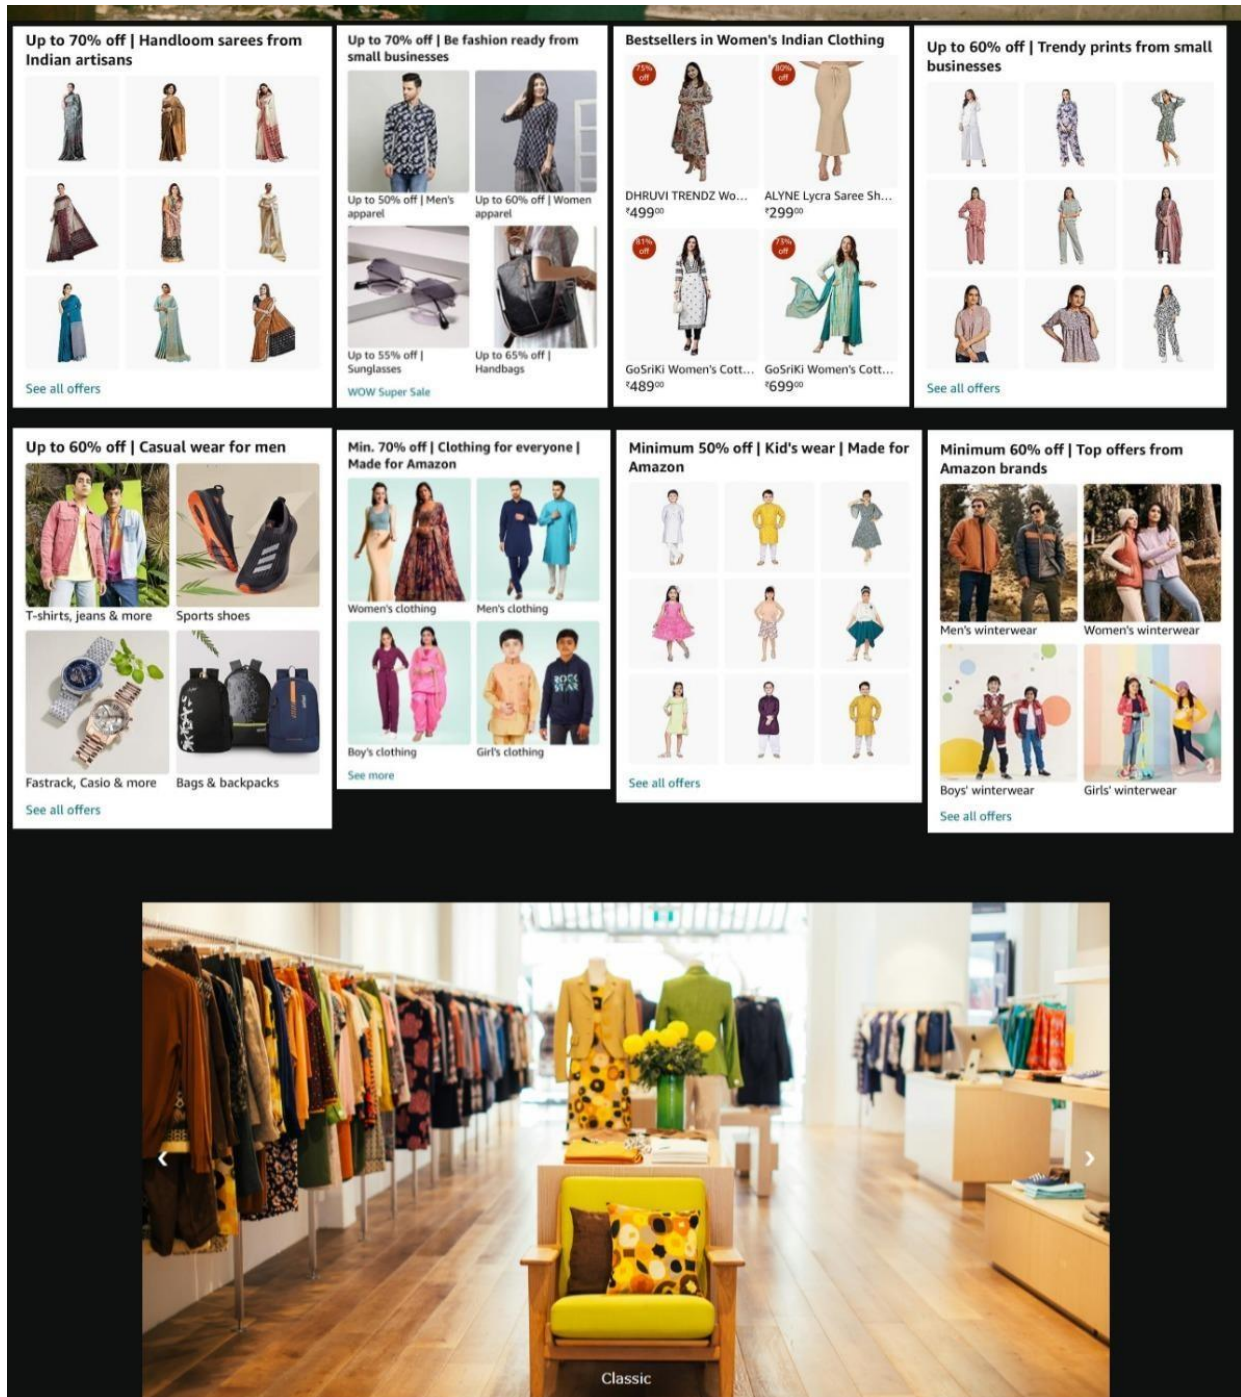

The first page of a website is called homepage. The definition of a website is a page or collection of pages on the World Wide Web that contains specific information provided by one person or entity and traces back to a common Uniform Resource Locator (URL).Each web page is written in codes and these codes describe the layout, format and content on the page. The most common coding language used to create web pages is HTML. Containing 3 images as Slideshow.

BODY:

Contains view of collection of bit of items available on website.

This one has some text about the store; generally have some links, a link to your newsletter.
Some sites are a little bit more minimal. One might not have a lot of information in footer. In fact, a lot of websites commonly don't. Footer could be of just a couple of information.
Footer would recommend to put return policy in footer. Recommend the minimum content and footer is a link to a page with return policy information, a link to contact page, as people may want to e-mail web holder if they have a question or want to do a return. Those are the links which would include. Would include links to social channels because those are always valuable.
Would also recommend having a link to a box for your e-mail sign up. Encourage people to sign up for website e-mail list, because marketing to them later will be very useful. This is a very minimal footer. Those are pretty common elements for a footer.

PEARL: Styles in Trend

We students of LPU (2023-2027) present our website project of E-commerce Fashion store.

PEARL

Styles in Trend...

We came with this idea of projecting a self-structured and planned E-commerce website to work on. This website is complete work of fiction and do not involve any false rights and claims. Its just a dummy website build on to present skills of HTML and CSS been learned during College. Thank you for having a look at our website.
